You are perfectly aware that the shock Surveyor D. H. Davison of Mi onk, of knowing he had married his daughter to a scoundrel would kill him." Lily clasped her hands convulsively

Long she sat there, lost in deep reverie; the day drew to a close, and dim shadows were falling before she roused herself. Curiously enough, no one had sought her; an unusual stillness-a foreboding of future ill, seemed hanging over all the household, making the place dull and silent. Feverishly getting paper and pens, Gipsy began to write—slowly at first, then as swiftly as the thoughts shaped themselves in her weary brain.

She did not heed the night-hours. Her head throbbed hotly, her eyes ached with the long working, and her fingers grew so stiff they could scarcely hold the pen.

Still she wrote on, and not until the last word had been added, the closelywritten sheets placed in an envelope, volley from their rifles, killing a sealed, and addressed, did she fling woman and child, the only passengers herself languidly on the bed, and fall in the coach, and gravely wounding the conductor. As she staggered, however, a low exclamation broke from him, and he caught her swaying form in his arms, noticing with terror the red blood oozing from a wound just above her heart.

"Good heavens, Gipsy! what have you done?"

"Betraved your secret-shared your doom!" she whispered tremulously; then, with a smile upon her lips, fell dead in his arms. Who can tell what thoughts chased each other through her guilty brother's brain! His one instinct was to find portiere might have been carved in out how far her words were true—if she had really betrayed him. He was not long left in doubt;

"We shall be happy when the shadow is cleared from our home, darling," Lord Audley whispered lovingly, the day after poor Gipsy's burial. "In a brighter future you will soon forget these brief months of woe. I am sorry, indeed, I ever forced you to wed that rascal."

"We will not speak his name," Lily answered shudderingly; "I never want to think of him again! He is dead to me, as he is dead to the world.'

Under her old name, with much of the old sweetness which had endeared her to all in past days, Lily returned to her father's home, trying to forget she had ever left its safe shelter.

Poor Peggy was, indeed, rejoiced to know her husband could face the world without a stigma on his character. Simon might look pale and work to a shadow; her welcome was not less glad when he at last returned.

"Thank God I see you again! Leigh exclaimed fervently, as he claspwas not there, but Lily and Gipsy both ed his wife in his arms. "Once I almost feared we should never meet in this world, and the thought brought me much suffering,"

"I knew you would come back to baby and me! Kiss your son, Simon.' Leigh took the laughing child in his arms, gazing tenderly into the sweet dimpled face. With almost reverent rosy ones, feeling for the first time his heart thrill with fatherly tenderness. "My two treasures! If it were not for Miss Lily, I should count this the happiest moment in my life. Remembering her trouble, and poor Miss Gipsy's sad death, there is just a wee shade of regret in my joy. Please God she will soon forget the past, and as the memory of Mr. Rosslyn grows fainter, may sweet thoughts of dear Master Basil keep fresh her heart, bringing peace to ease her sorrow!" Peggy sighed, then smiled contentedly into her husband's face. What right had they to grieve when fate had been so kind! Life for them had in deed recommenced, and this time without one dark cloud.

A Coil of Wire.

How are cakes or lumps of steel made into fine wire? The process is interesting. How do the steel blooms become finely polished wire? The manufacture is peculiar. The bloom, as we follow it in the wire factory, is first cut into billets some twenty inches long and four inches square. These are brought red hot from the furnaces and slipped between the rolls. In a moment the billet of steel becomes a stout, fibery serpent. A man at the opposite side of the furnace nips it around the neck with the tongs, and slips its head between the next and smaller pair of rolls, so that before the tail of the red serpent has emerged from between the larger rolls, the head has been squeezed to smaller dimensions in the second rolls. The same process is repeated again after the rod has passed through the second roll, workmen being ready to seize the serpent, twist his body around and let his head be caught by the third roll. Thus it is passed on, each time becoming longer and thinner, and the billet, after passing through eighteen rolls, becomes a wire rod. As the rod passes through the last roll it "What do you want?" he asked is conveyed through a pipe three inches in circumference. As it wriggles out of the pipe in twisted form it is thrown across the iron floor of the factory or wire mill. The rolls are kept constantly at work, for one rod has no sooner passed through the first roll than another enters it, and as the rod grows in length one end may be passing out across the floor while the other is half a dozen rolls in the rear. Thus it twists its dull-red, thread-like length like a serpent in and out of the rolls, often near the ankles of the workmen, ready with their tongs to guide it onward in its devious windings. When the rod is at last spun out upon the floor the end is taken up and twisted upon a reel, which rapidly winds it into a coil. After the rods leave the "blooming mill' they are taken to the "wire mill," where they are hung around wooden blocks, perhaps half a dozen coils on each block, which are lowered into huge tubs of sulphuric acid, and allowed to remain there until the acid lowed to remain there until the acid has removed the impurities from the surface. The blocks are then raised by a pulley, and the rods are thrown upon the floor and washed with the hose. Having been loaded on trucks

Sal-Muscatelle is Nature's own product; it supplies and dried, one end of each rod is pointed by a revolving machine so as to pass into the die which is to draw the rods into wire. Having been removed to the wire blocks, the rods are then drawn by being passed through a tapering hole in a steel die.

The steel rod, having thus been transformed into wire, is taken to the annealing furnace, where it is annealed and polished by a secret process. The wire, which has hitherto been of a dull brown color, is given a bright polish by the annealing and the cleaning which it afterward receives. Having been removed to the galvanizing house, the wire is run over a series of wheels and slides which stretch it from the floor horizontally, and, working automatically, dips the wire in lime every time it reaches the floor. In galvanizing, the process consisting of the wire SAL-MUSCATELLE CO passing through a solution of muriatic acid and gravel, next through a drying furnace, and afterward through a metal bath of zinc. The wire next passes a "wiping box," filled with mineral wool, which is agitated by a number of rollers. This substance wipes off the surplus zine, and bestows upon the wire a smooth surface. The long line of wire, which now has a bright, silvery appearance, is then bundled up in reels ready for the market, each reel weighing about 100 pounds.—Pittsburg Cor. Wheeling Register.

Uncle Sam's Sayings.

Boys, be sensible, be deliberate, be sober, be temperate in all things, be industrious; don't get too deeply interested in polities, and you will grow up to be good and useful citizens.

I am convinced that a man who tries to do right in this world, although he may not be up in creeds and church disciplines, has got into a habit that he won't have to diseard when he gets into heaven.

The man who does right more from fear of punishment than from love of right, is not prompted by the highest and purest motives. Once let him be conv.need that he is secure from detection, and he is liable to develop into a full-fledged criminal in the twinkling

The luckiest man is often the most unfortunate. In fact, to emphasize the paradox, there are men whose wonderful good luck has proved their utter ful good luck has proved their utter the other hand, some of the land thousands of others in every part of grandest characters among men, and some of the greatest of life's successes, have grown out of or been founded upon misfortune and failure.

An irate pastor, in conversing with a friend, one day, remarked that newspaper men as a rule were not good Christians, and that he expected to meet but very few of the profession in heaven. The friend, who was something of a wag, replied: "Well, brother, I am sorry to hear you say so; for a place where there are no newspapers and no editors would certainly be undeniably dull and prosy. Why, think of it, who would give us the news?"

"Talk about dissipation," said a friend to me the other day, a man who has not attend a modern church social has no idea of what it takes to constitute dissipation." I thought the sermon a queer one to make, but a little reflection has convinced me that it contains a modicim of truth. However, there are degrees; and those held during the strawberry season are not so terrible in their effects as those coldweather festivals, when the succulent

How Far the Human Jaw Travels.

The noon-day customers were dropping out one by one from a Sansom street restaurant, when a dyspeptic looking man who sat at the next table startled me by saying: "Have you any idea how many miles a man's jaw will travel in the course of his life, assuming that he lives to be 70 years

"Well, I never thought of it," answered a young man, who halted in his wild career of beefsteak. The dyspeptic man changed his seat and exposed a much soiled piece of paper with some figures on it, which he proceeded to explain:

"For the first ten years a child's jaw will go about 56 inches daily or 200,-750 inches altogether in a decade. From his 10th to his 20th year, what with chewing gum, food and tobacco, he will work his jaw for, say, four hours a day, at an average of one-half of an inch per minute; that would make in a day 120 inches, or in the 10 years 438,000 inches. During this time he will talk about five hours a day, traversing about three-fourths of an inch with his jaw; that would give in 10 years 822,250 inches to be added to our former figures.

"For the next 45 years he will spend sixty minutes a day in eating, when he will open his mouth one-half an inch a minute and seven hours in talking, when he will average five-eighths of an inch; that is when you figure it out,

5,008,625 inches. "We now have our man 65 years old. For the last five years his jaw takes a rest. He will eat no more than 30 minutes a day at one-half inch a minute, or 27,345 inches, and in talking the distance traveled will not amount to more than 338,500 inches. Now for the total. If we add the various sums together we get 6,835,470 inches, and dividing by 63,360, the number of inches in a mile, you find that the maxillary journey is a distance of 107 miles and a fraction."

"That is certainly interesting," said the young man. "Have you ever calculated the same lip-trip for a woman? "My dear boy," came the slow, sadeply, "life is short."—Philadelphic

Cleaning Windows.

There are few things that add so much to the attractiveness of a house as clean windows, and the housekeeper, recognizing this, deems it one of the important duties of her housework that they shall be as clean and bright as she can make them. Everybody dreads rheumatism. It is very prevalent at this changing time of year. It was formerly seldom known except among those who worked much out of doors. Baby Elephantt.

How the young elephants in a large herd escape from being crushed is something of a mystery, as they are almost continually in motion; but when a herd is alarmed the young almost immediately disappear. close observer would see that each baby was trotting along directly beneath its mother, sometimes between her fore legs. On the march when a little elephant is born in herd they stop a day or two to allow it time to exercise its little timbs and gain strength, and then they press on, the mother and the babies in front, the old tuskers followlowing in the rear, but ready to rush forward at the first alarm. When rocky or hilly places are reached the little ones are helped up by the mothers who push then from behind and in various ways; but when a river has to be forded or swum a comical sight

The stream may be very rapid and rough, as the Indian rivers often are after a rain, and at such a place the babies would hardly be able to keep up with the rest; so the mothers and fathers help them. At first all plunge boldly in-both old and young-and when the old elephants reach deep water, where they have to swim, the young scramble upon their backs and sit astride, sometimes two being seen in this position. But the very young elephants often require a little more care and attention, so they are held either upon the tusks of the father or grasped in the trunk of the mother, and held over or just at the surface of the water. Such a sight is a curious one, to say the least-the great elephants almost hidaen beneath the water, here and there a young one seemingly walking on the water, resting upon a submerged back, or held aloft while the dark waters roar below. -St. Nicholas.

A Wonderful Sealing Craft. A craft the description of which equals anything to be found in the pages of Jules Verne's eccentric writings is at present under construction in this city, says The Montreal Witness. The craft may be described as a "catamaran," or steam launch built of steel, with two cigar-shaped hulls, each about sixty-five feet in length, with a deck binding the two hulls together. Each hull is built in two compartments, one of which is to be used for water ballast and the other as a reservoir of coal-oil-the latter being used for fuel. The motive power is obtained from two vertical engines and two propellers, the shafts of the latter being so arranged as to lift themselves out of the way on striking floating ice or any other obstacle. The boat is intended for whale, walrus, and seal hunting in the Arctic, and will be furnished with a Gatling gun as well as a powerful electric battery, sufficiently strong to paralyze any aquatic mammal extant. The boat is said to be a copy of a German invention. It will be taken apart when finished and packed for transportation on board the whaler to which it is an accessory.

THURSDAY, NOV. 3, 1887.

IT is reported from Chicago that Gov. Oglesby is likely to commute the sentence of anarchist Fielden to life imprisonment, on the ground that his participation in the murderous conspiracy is not clear; and that it is believed Parsons, Schwab and Fisher are likely to receive a commutation. We shall be compelled to believe this when it is demonstrated. We have no especial convictions about Fielden as contrasted with the others, but of Parsons we would unhesitatingly say he is the guiltiest of the lot. He is an American citizen, of intelligence and education, reared in good social position, and he sinned against greater light than any of the foreigners. His moral guilt is greater than that of any of his fellowconspirators, even though his actual participation were less. If one only were to be hanged on the ground of desert that one should be Parsons. Gov. Oglesby would offend against the convictions of the great majority of citizens, should he interfere with the execution of the penalty that the law has decreed.

BEN BUTLER'S extraordinary argument before the national Supreme Court in behalf of the condemned anarchists recalls that erratic "statesman's" declaration to a class of law students that he would never wish to defend a man unless he knew him to be guilty. He should now add to that declaration that neither would he defend a man where there was any reasonable ground of defense-or if there should be such he would carefully avoid it. His ground in the anarchist case is that the aliens in the case are not answerable to laws enacted since the ratification of treaties with their countries, those treaties guaranteeing to them all the privileges, immunities and protection of the laws, which Gen. Butler interprets to mean the laws as they were at that time, changes in the statutes being powerless to change their status. According to this highly ingenious and interesting doctrine, laws against bombthrowing, which we might pass now, would be quite worthless, the bombthrowers being chiefly aliens who by treaty are made superior to the lawmaking power, and superior to the edict of the whole body of citizens of a state. They may run saloons regardless of any restrictive laws we may pass, and engage in conspiracies without responsibility to any conspiracy laws that may have been framed since those treaties were ratified; and, all together, their privileges are much greater as aliens in this country than they would be as citizens of this country. Go to, Butler!

THE final absorption of the Baltimore and Ohio telegraph system by the Western Union, which puts the entire telegraph system of the country practically in the control of one man, is already bearing fruit which will ultimately inure to the public benefit, and thus Jay Gould shall become an involuntary philanthropist. The project of a government postal telegraph has received new impetus, and Senator Cullom believes that legislation to that end will be secured at the coming session of Congress.

CLEVELAND ECLIPSED. Mr. Cleveland lately made something of a stir in Georgia, as the first democratic President of the United States for more than a quarter of a century, but he was a sideshow of small importance compared with the late President of the Confederate States, Jefferson Davis, exhibited in the same state a week afterward. On Wednesday, the 26th of October, at the city of Macon, a 'reception" was given to the ancient relic of the rebellion, which was in many respects the most remarkable demonstration of sympathy for the 'lost cause" that has been witnessed since the war closed. There was a 'review of Confederate veterans by their old President," at sight of whom the "veterans" and the people alike became wild with excitement and rushed by thousands over grounds and over fences in a grand stampede to touch the hand of their idolized Jeff. They crowded and crushed and crawled over each other's shoulders, and velled until pandemonium lost its prestige. Rebel flags and badges were everywhere, in the crowd and throughout the city. An old rebel battle flag was passed up to Davis and he kissed it and from it and put it in her bosom; and and choicest then the yells were redoubled, with eries of "God bless Jeff Davis," "God oless the flag," etc. Every one who could get in reach of Jeff's hand kissed it, and those who could not passed around the flag among themselves and kissed that. Gov. Gorden made a speech, and in the evening Gen. Henry Jackson, Cleveland's appointee to the important post of Minister to Mexico, voiced the sentiment of the crowd in such utterances as these: "By invitation of the state of Geor-Her glory is in her history. Her history They were guilty of no treason to her To whom, then, could they be traitors? There was a sovereign smitten to earth by traitor hands, trampled in the dust y traitor feet; but the hands and the

The rebel yell—the vaunting boast;
I saw the wounds of patriot dead.
"What made you go?" my Jennie said.

My dear," I said, but nothing more, For, glancing through the Senate walls, The rebel generals had the floor, And ruled the nation's council halls! 'Papa,' she urged, "why did you go?" 'My child," I said, "I do not know."

I hear of "patriot," lauded loud-'Tis not the patient man we knew; Heroes of whom the world is proud-Not those whose "Forward!" led us through;

Of "cause" most holy, marching far—I know not why I went to war.

A VASSAR COLLEGE SPREE. Mysterious Midnight Spread-The

Martyr of the Tin Basin. Dearer to the heart of college students than all public occasions of social life are the cosy private spreads. Only a college girl knows the meaning of a college spread. It is a proof of the depravity of human nature that no spread is perfect unless held after 10 o'clock, when in the midst of the hilarity each feels the influence of a prospective summons from her corridor teacher to receive a sermon on the value of law and order? Try to imagine yourself an unseen spectator at a mysterious midnight spread. You see a large room all ablaze with light, but with blinds shut and curtains drawn, and a gossamer waterproof draped carefully over the transom, lest the rays should annoy some outsider. Within is a medley. Books are out of the way for once, and the table is covered with a miscellaneous collection of plates, saucers, glasses, a cup or two, a few spoons, rarely a knife and fork. Among these are scattered a loaf of bread, a bag of crackers, pots of deviled ham and jelly, a bottle of olives, a pitcher of milk and another of oysters. Half a dozen girls were in the room, one of them anxiously inspecting the water in a tin basin that she is carefully holding over the flame of a drop light. The rest are scattered about the room in attiudes more or less graceful. The bed, the chairs and the rugs on the floor are equally patronized. All the girls are making frantic endeavors to evolve a theory as to the making of cyster soup, and as the theories gradually take definite shape they are hurled at the martyr of the tin basin.

"You must heat the water first, then the milk, and put in the oysters just be-fore it is done," remarks one sage cook from the depths of an easy chair.

"No, you don't! you don't want any water—just milk and oysters boiled together," says number two, coiled like a kitten on a rug.

"You must heat the oysters sepa rately," calls a grave, oratorical voice from among the pillows.

"Girls," said the martyr, looking around with an heroic air, "you don't one of you know the first thing about it. I'm making this soup, and if you don't like it when it is done, you can come and make some yourselves. Just at present I have the floor."

She confirms her statement by a vigorous gesture that threatens the equilibrium of the tin basin, and the others own themselves obliterated and apply their genius to other topics. The soup done, it is served in cups, or glasses, or saucers, and is pronounced perfect. The suffering martyr has become a smiling saint, and sits triumphantly on the edge of the table, while some one spreads a cracker with jam for her benefit. The tide of fun rises. Again and again a laugh rings out, to be smothered in the midst by the tragic gasp, "Girl's, somebody's coming!" But no one comes, and after oysters have been eaten, college news discussed, and harrowing ghost stories told in the darkened room, the girls steal away with a reckless declaration that they have had fun enough to pay for a whole week's flunks.—Lippincott's Mag-The Olive and Its Home.

It is not too much to say that the day is not far distant when the olive and the olive oil industry will become one of the most important in the state of California. The first trees planted are still in good condition, although they have been neglected at times, and are 111 years old. The olive grows from cuttings, like the willow, and will bear in ten years. It comes down to us from our fathers, along with the fig and the vine. There is a pretty allusion to it in connection with the first navigator; olive wood was used largely in the construction of Solomon's temple, while the most illustrious of preachers delivered his greatest sermon from an elevation shaded by these silver leafed trees. There are many olive trees now living in European countries 1,000 years old and upward. This tree will grow and thrive in rocky and sandy places, but must not be too far from the sea. In California it does best from San Diego to Point Conception, from one or two to twenty miles from the sea. Its true home is a semi-tropical climate from one to twenty-five miles from the sea; those at Damascus are fifty miles away, and I have seen them in this country in a flourishing condition even 150 miles away from the saline influence of the Pacific.-

Health is of such extreme value that he who is not healthy cannot possibly be wealthy. In his pockets, or in the vault of some bank, he may have title deeds, mortgage deeds and bonds; but if he cannot work, play or enjoy his food, he is a poor man, and the estates he claims to own on this globe are of no more real good to him than if they were situated in the moon. Civilized people, who are possessed of a mania for owning things, underrate the value of their own bodies. It is said that an Irishman who had only $1 expended the dollar for a purse "to keep it in."

There are many Americans who barter their lives for fine houses to dwell in, or swap healthy livers for gold dollars. Good health cannot be bought in boxes, bottles or buckets, or at so much a pound or foot. It can be obtained only by a healthy mode of living. Without the capacity to enjoy life, no man can be wealthy. No kind of good appetite can be bought with money; and the man who has not a good appetite—for healthy work or wholesome food—is a poor man. -Professor Riley.

The Plain Road to Heaven.

Mr. Labouchere relates this story of Bishop Wilberforce, which has not before, he thinks, been printed. The bishop was riding in one of the old fashioned broad gauge railway carriages and was seated at one end of it when he heard a truculent voice at the other end exclaim: "I would dearly like to meet the Bishop of Oxford. I will be bound I would puzzle him." "Very well," replied the bishop to the speaker, who had not perceived him, "now is your time, for I am that person." The man was rather taken aback, but quickly recovering said, "Well, my lord, can you tell a plain man a plain way to get to heaven?" "Certainly," replied the bishop; "nothing is more easy. You have only to turn at once to the right and go straight forward."

When a burial permit is brought in the office to me and I see that the occupation of the dead man was cigar making, I am ready to guess at once that he died of consumption. And my guess is right in ninety-nine of a hundred cases. The trade is a most unwholesome one. The stooping position of the cigarmaker and his constant inhalation of tobacco particles invite diseases of the lungs, and they generally come. — Mortuary Clerk in his sermon for her boy. ### LINCOLN STATUE.

Unveiling of the Statue at Lincoln Park Chicago.

Flag and Exposes the Great Work of Art to the Public View.

Old Abe's Grandson Draws Aside the

Since the night of the great fire Lincoln Park has never contained within the same area so many human beings as thronged its plains, clustered under its trees, and in every variety of vehicle crowded its roadways Saturday afternoon. A grand stand had been hastily thrown up to the east of Dearborn avenue entrance. Seats were also arranged around the terrace leading to the pedestal upon which stood the veiled figure of Abraham Lincoln by Augustus Saint-Gaudens in accordance with the will and bequest of Eli Bates. A military band played a spirited prelude of airs appropriate to the occasion, among them "My Old Kentucky Home."

The statue itself, rising twelve feet above the terrace, was visible from Clark street to the lake.

At 3 o'clock Mayor Roche assumed the chair. Mr. Thomas F. Withrow gave a brief sketch of Eli Bates.

Mr. William C. Goudy on behalf of the Lincoln Park Commissioners accepted the gift of the statue from Mr. Withrow, who ad presented it in the name of the Bates bequest trustees. A handsome lad had meanwhile modestly taken his place at the halyards, and amid the roar of cannon, the triumphant strains of National airs, the cheers of thousands, and the in the United States were 193; for Can- tears of many the colossal bronze was unveiled by young Abraham Lincoln, while the gray heavens became aglow with mild silvery light.

ST. GAUDEN'S STATUE OF LINCOLN. The intense feelings of the thousands who had assembled to witness the caremony were divided between a disposition to hail the splendid triumph of the sculptor and eager curiosity to examine its merits in detail. There could be only one opinion: that the counterfeit presentment was indeed Abraham Lincoln. The idealism of the artist's scheme had been perfectly embodied. Dignified, as becomes becomes the emancipator of 4,000,000 human beings; tender, as was the heart of the gentlest of men; sad, as he must have been throughout the whole of his official life; tall and lithe, but neither muscular nor sinewy, he stands ferever, his rugged, deeply-seamed countenance stooping, as it were, a little over the people, as his mind must have stooped upon them all, North and South, with pity, attention, and compassion, to the close of his conscious-

The sculptor's study of his subject has been minute and scrupplous. The truthfulness of the whole was instantaneously realized. Then scrutiny passed to the details. There is the old-fashioned carelessly rolled collar falling in reversed turrow over the thick silk cravat. There is the old-fashioned shirt-front, with the two wide plaits on either side of the middle one with its honest buttons and buttonholes exactly in the middle. There is the medium low wrinkled vest, none too well fitted, and the long round old style black corded watchguard passing about the neck and carrying the watch to the left pocket of the vest. There is the old frock coat, its slightly shirred sleeve tops, its loose, bagging sleeves, its buttons none too tight in their places, its collar showing the passing from the old high roll, like that on Byron and O'Connell, to the narrow fashionable flatness of the present day. There are the loose trousers, ill-fitting at the ankles, and the Western squaretoed boots. The bronze chair of state relieves the figure and appropriately symbolizes the exalted functions of the office

it suggests. The oration of Lincoln's old friend. Leonard Swett, was worthy of the theme and the occasion. He told of the obscure pirth, the early toil, the dreary youth, and he brawny early manhood of Abraham Lincoln; and this portion of the address s its most charming feature. There were ouches of perfect art upon the descripion of their riding the circuit together when they swam swollen, bridgeless rivers, slept in beds that were not long enough, te the rudest food, and were in constant contact with discomfort; and through it all no word of complaint had ever passed he lips of the railsplitter and flatboatman become lawyer and legislator. Ere long, if everything goes well with the projectors, Cincinnatians will be witnessing the odd spectacle of wagons scudding about the streets delivering soup, just as milk-wagon's go about delivering the lacteal fluid. The philanthropist who proposes to place the hot soup boon within the reach of the most ordinary Cincinnatian is Mr. Ben Culbert, the well-known steward of the river steamer Paris Brown. Ben is at present actively engaged in the organization of a stock company for the manufacture and distribution of soup. His idea is to inaugurate the enterprise in a small way, and let it grow up as the population and the appetite for soup of the city increase. About $5,000 will be invested in the business at the outset. An establishment will be instituted where from five thousand to ten thousand gallons of soup will be made daily. The soup will be delivered in wagons to all parts of the city. The prospective customers are the saloons that serve warm lunches with drinks, and the tenants of flats who do no cooking at their homes and take their meals on the outside. The soup will be hauled about the city in cans, and will be ladled out just as milk is by the milkmen. Under each can there will be a glowing gasoline stove, so that the soup can be served hot and ready for use. In the variety of souns the manufacturers will play no favorite. They will manufacture all kinds-about ten different varieties a day. Each wagon wili be supplied with all the kinds cooked, so if the customers do not see what they want let them ask for it. ## A Big Bar of Bullion.

The second largest bar of bullion ever melted in the United States assay office in Helena was handled yesterday by Melter Meyendorf. It came from the Jay Gould mine, weighed about 2,500 ounces, was a little over 500 fine in gold, and was worth about $27,000. When it had changed from a liquid into a solid but red-hot bar it was imly cooled to be handled. The operation, which included several interesting features, other than those detailed. was intently watched by a small party of visitors, who were much interested in seeing $27,000 changed from a solid to a liquid form and then to a solid again. The only larger bar ever handled in the office was one of about 3,300 ounces, but several have been melted of larger value. Since Jan. 1 the office has received about one thousand deposits, many more than for the corresponding period of last year and of considerable larger aggregate value.—Helena, (M. T.) Inde-

Dr. Talmage Discourses Upon the Evils of a Distorted Mind.

Nothing So Exhausts the Physical Health or Mental Faculty as a Protracted Indulgence

BROOKLYN, Oct. 23.—The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., preached in the Brooklyn Tabernacle this morning on the subject: 'Forgiveness before Sundown." Before explaining some passages concerning Hezekiah, Dr. Talmage gave out the following hymn, which was sung by the congregation:

"This glorious hope revives Our courage by the way, While each in expectation lives And longs to see the day."

Professor Henry Eyre Browne rendered on the organ an aria with variations, by Cramer. The text of the sermon was from Ephesians iv. 26: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath." Dr. Talmage said: What a pillow embroidered of all collors hath the dying day! The cradle of clouds from which the sun rises is beautiful enough, but it is surpassed by the many-colored mausoleum in which at evening it is buried. Sunset among the mountains! It almost takes one's breath away to recall the scene. The long shadows stretching over the plain make the glory of the departing light, on the tiptop crags and struck aslant through the foliage, the more transpicuous. Saffron and gold, purple and crimson commingled. All the castles of cloud in conflagration. Burning Moscows on the sky. Hanging gardens of roses at their deepest blush. Banners of vapor, red as if from carnage, in the battle of the red as if from carnage, in the battle of the elements. The hunter among the Adirondacks, and the Swiss villager among the Alps know what is a sunset among the mountains. After a storm at sea the rolling grandeur iuto which the sun goes down to bathe at nightfall is something to make weird and splendid dreams out of for a lifetime. Alexander Smith in his poem compared the sunset to "the barren beach of heli," but this wonderful spectacle of nature makes me think of the burnished wall of heaven. Paul in prison writing my text remembers some of the gorgeous sunsets among the mountains of Asia Minor, and how he had ofmountains of Asia Minor, and how he had often seen the towers of Damascus blaze in the close of the Oriental days, and he flashes out that memory in the text when he says: Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

Sublime and all-suggestive duty for people then and people now. Forgiveness before sundown. He who never feels the throb of indignation is imbecile. He who can walk among the injustices of the world, in-flicted upon himself and others, without flush of upon himself and others, without flush of cheek, of flash of eye, or agitation of nature is either in smypathy with wrong or semidiotic. When Ananias, the high priest, ordered the When Ananias, the high priest, ordered the constables of the court room to smite Paul in the mouth, Paul fired up and said: "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall." In the sentence immediately before my text Paul commands the Ephesians: "Be ye angry and sin not." It all depends on what you are mad at and long the feeling lasts whether anger is right or wrong. Life is full of exasperations. Saul after David Succept after Gideon, Korah afafter David, Succoth after Gideon, Korah after Moses, the Pasquins after Augustus, the Pharisees after Christ, and every one has had his pursuers, and we are swindled, or belied, or misrepresented, or presecuted, or in some way wronged, and the danger is that healthful indignation shall become baleful spite, and that our feelings settle down into a prolonged outpouring of temper displeasing to God and ruinous to ourselves, and hence the important injuction of the text: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath." Why that limitation to one's anger? Why that

Why that limitation to one's anger? Why that period of flaming vapor set to punctuate a flaming disposition? What has the suaset got to do with one's resentful emotions? Was it a haphazard sentiment written by Paul without special significance? No, no; I think of five reasons why we should not let the sun set before our temper sets.

First: Because twelve hours is long enough to be cross about any wrong inflicted upon us.

Nothing is so exhausting to physical health or mental faculty as a protracted indulgence of ill-humor. It racks the nervous system. It hurts the digestion. It heats the blood in brain and heart until the whole body is first brain and heart until the whole body is first overheated and then depressed. Beside that, it sours the disposition, turns one aside from his legitimate work, expends energies that ought to be better employed, and does more harm than it does our antagonist. Paul gives us a good, wide allowance of time for legitimate denunciation, from six o'clock to six o'clock, but says: "Stop there!" Watch six o'clock, but says: "Stop there!" Watch the descending orb of day, and when it reach-es the horizon take a reef in your disposition. Unloose your collar and cool off. Change the Unroll your tight fist and shake hands with some one. Bank up the fires at the curfew bell. Drive the prowling dog of enmity back to its kennel. The hours of this morning will to its kennel. pass by, and the afternoon will arrive, and the sun will begin to set, and I beg you on its blazing hearth throw all your feuds, in-

Other things being equal, the man who preserves good temper will come out ahead. An old essayist says that the celebrated John Henderson of Bristol, England, was at a dining party where political excitement ran high and the debate got angry, and while Hender-son was speaking, his opponent, unable to answer his argument, dashed a glass of wine in his face, when the speaker deliberately wiped the liquid from his face and said: "This, sir, is a digression; now, f you please, for the main argument." While worldly philosophy could help ment." While worldly philosophy could help but very few to such equipolse of spirit, the grace of God could help any man to such a triumph. "Imposible," you say, "I would have either left the table in anger or have knocked the man down." But I have come to knocked the man down." But I have come to believe that nothing is impossible if God help, since what I saw at Beth-Shan faith cure in London, England, two summers ago. While the religious service was going on Rev. Dr. Boardman, glorious man! since gone to his heavenly rest, was telling the scores of rich people present that Christ was there as of old to heal all diseases, and that, if they would only believe, their sickness; would depart. I only believe, their stekness, would depart. I saw a woman! near me, with hand and arm twisted of rheumatism, and her wrist was fiery with inflammation, and it looked like have all seen and sympathized with, cases be-yond all human healing. At the preacher's reiteration of the words: "Will you believe? Do you believe? Do you believe now?". I heard this poor sick woman say with an emphasis which sounded through the building: "I do believe." And then she laid her twisted arm and hand out as straight as your arm and hand, or mine. If I had seen one rise from the dead, I would not have been much more thrilled. Since then I believe that God will do anything in answer to our prayer and in answer to our faith, and he can heal our bod-

ou transact this glorious work of forgiveness efore meridian. Again: We ought not to let the sun go down on our wrath, because we will sleep better if we are at peace with everybody. Insomnia is getting to be one of the most prevalent of disorders. How few people retire at ten o'clock at night and sleep clear through to six in the morning! To relieve this disorder all narcotmorning! To relieve this disorder all narcotics, and sedatives, and chloral, and bromide of potassium, and cocaine and intoxicants are used, but nothing more important than a quiet spirit if we would win somnolence. How is a spirit if we would win somnolence. How is a man to sleep when he is in mind pursuing an enemy? with what nerveous twitch he will start out of a dream! That new plan for cornering his foe will keep him wide awake while the clock strikes eleven, twelve, one, two, three, four, I give you an unfailing prescription for wakefulness: Spend the evening hours rehearsing your wrongs and the best way of avenging them. Hold a convention of friends on this subject in your parlor or offices at eight and nine o'clock. Close the evening by writing a bitter letter expressing your sentiments. Take from the desk or pigeon hole the papers in the case to refresh your mind down and wait for the coming of the day, and it will come before sleep comes or your sleep will be a worried quiescence and, if you take the precaution to lie flat, on your

Why let your foes come into the sanctitles of your dormitory? Why let those standerers who have already torn your reputation to pieces or injured your business, bend over your midnight pillow and drive from you one of the greatest blessings that God can offer sweet, refreshing, all invigorating sleep. Why not fence out your enemies by the golden bars of the sunset? Why not stand behind the barricade of evening cloud and say to them: "Thus far and no farther." Many a man and many a woman is having the health of body as well as the health of soul eaten away by a malevolent spirit. I have in time of religious awakening had persons, night after night, come into the inquiry room and get no peace of soul. After a while I have bluntly asked her: "Is there not some one against whom you have a hatred that you are not willing to give up?" After a little confusion she has slightly whispered: "Yes." Then I said to her: "You will never find peace with God as long as you retain that virulence."

A boy in Sparta having stole a fox kept him under his coat and, though the fox was gnawing his vitals, he submitted to it rather than expose his misdeed. Many a man with a smiling face has under his jacket an animosity that is gnawing away the strength of his body and the integrity of his soul. Better get rid of that hidden fox as soon as possible. There are hundreds of domestic circles where that which most is needed is the spirit of forgivenness. Brothers apart, and parents and children apart. Solomon says a which most is needed is the spirit of forgivenness. Brothers apart, and isisters apart, and parents and children apart. Solomon says a brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city. Are there not enough sacred memories of your childhood to bring you together? The rabbins recount how that Nebuchadnezzar's son had such a spite againt his father that after he was dead, he had his father burned to ashes and then put the ashes into four sacks and tied them to four eagles' necks which flew away in opposite directions. And there are now domestic antipathies that seem forever to have scattered all parental memories to the four winds of Heaven. How far the eagles fly with that sacred ashes. The memories to the four winds of Heaven. How far the eagles fly with that sacred ashes. The hour of sundown makes to that family no practical suggestion. Thomas Carlyle in his biography of Frederic the Great says the old King was told by the confessor he must be at peace with his enemies if he wanted to enter Heaven. Then he said to his wife, the Queen: "Write to your brother after I am dead that I Write to your brother after I am dead that lorgive him. Roloff, the confessor, said:

'Write to your brother after I am dead that I I forgive him. Roloff, the confessor, said: 'Her majesty had better write him immediately,' 'No,' said the King, 'after I am dead; that will be safer.' So he let the sun of his earthly existence go down upon his wrath.

Again: We ought not to allow the sun set before forgiveness takes place, because we might not live to see another day. And what if we should be urshered into the presence of, our Majer with a grader upon our son!? The if we should be urshered into the presence of our Maker with a grudge upon our soul? The majority of people depart this life in the night. Between eleven o'clock p. m. and three o'clock a. m. there is something in the atmosphere which relaxes the grip which the body has on the soul, and most of people enter the next world through the shadows of this world. Perhaps God may have arranged it in that way so as to make the contrast the more glorious. I have seen sunshiny days in this world that must have been almost like the radiance of Heaven. But as most people leave this earth between sunbeen almost like the radiance of Heaven. But as most people leave this earth between sundown and sunrise they quit this world at its darkest, and Heaven, always bright, will be the brighter for that contrast. Out of blackness into irradiation. Shall we then leap over the roseate banks of sunset into the favorite hunting ground of disease and death, carrying our animosities with us? Who would want to confront his God, against whom we have all done meaner things would want to confront his God, against whom we have all done meaner things than anybody has ever done against us, carrying old grudges? How can we expect His forgiveness for the greater when we are not willing to forgive others the less? Napoleon was encouraged to undertake the crossing of the Alps because Charlemagne had previously crossed them. And all this rugged path of forgiveness bears the bleeding footsteps of Him who conquered through sufootsteps of Him who conquered through suf-ering, and we ought to be willing to follow. On the night of our departure from this life into the next, our one plea will have to be for enercy, and it will have to be offered in the mercy, and it will have to be offered in the presence of Him who has said: "If you forgive not men their trespasses neither will your Heavenly Father forgive your trespasses." What a sorry plight if we stand there hating this one, and hating that one, and wishing this one a damage, and wishing some one else a calamity, and we ourselves needing forgiveness for ten thousand times ten thousand obliquities of heart and life. When our last hour comes, we want it to find us all right. Hardly anything affects me so much in the uncovering of ancient Pompeii as the account of the soldier who, after the city had for many centuries been covered with the submergement, but the explorer, seventeen hundred years after, found the body of that brave fellow in right position. And it will be a grand thing ff, when our last moment pose that I am any more of a coward than most people, but I declare to you that I would not dure to sleep to-night if there were any being in all the earth with whom I would not gladly shake hands, lest, during the night hours, my spirit dismissed to other realms, I should, because of my unforgiving spirit, be denied divine forgiveness.

"But." says some women, there is a horrid creature that has so injured me that rather than make up with her I would die first. Well, sister you may take your choice—for one or the other it will be—your complete pardon of her or Gods eternal banishuent of you. "But," says some men, "that fellow who cheated me out of those goods, or damaged my business credit, or started that lie about me in the newspaper, or by his pefidy broke up my domestic happiness, forgive him I cannot, forgive him I will not." Well, brother, take your choice. You will never be at peace with God till you are at peace with man, Feeling as you now do, you would not get so near the harber of heaven as to see the lightship. Better leave that man with the God who said: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." You may say: "I will make him squirm, I mean to pursue him to the death," but you are damaging yourself more than you damage him and you are making heaven for your own soil an impossibility. If he will not be reconciled to you, be bility. If he will not be reconciled to you, be reconciled to him. In five or six hours it will be sundown. The dahlias will bloom against the western sky. Somewhere between this and that take a shovel and bury the old quar-

and that take a shovel and bury the old quarrel at least six feet deep. "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

"But," you say, "I have more than I can bear; too much is put upon me and I am not to blame if I am somewhat revengeful and unrelenting." Then I think of a little child at the moving of some goods from a store.
The father was putting some rolls of goods on the child's arm, package after package, and the child's arm, package after package, and some one said: "That child is being overloaded and so much ought not to be put upon her," when the child responded: "Father knows how much I can carry;" and God, our knows how much I can carry;" and God, our Father, will not allow too much imposition on his children. In the day of eternity it will be found you had not one annoyance too many, not one outrage too many. Your heavenly Father knows how much you can carry.

Again: We ought not to allow the passage of the sunset hoar before the dismissal of all our affronts, because we may associate the sublimest action of the soul with the sublimest wards you may be put into the catalogue of the "all things" that "work together for good to those that love God." I have had multitudes of friends, but I have found in my own experience that God so arranged it that the greatest opportunities of usefulness that have been opened before me were opened by enemies.

There was some gate, or some room, or some graden walk, where you were affiance or some graden walk. so arranged it that the grown or comportunities of usefulness that have been portunities of usefulness that have been opened before me were opened by enemies. And when, years ago, they conspired against me, that opened all Christendom to me as a field in which to preach the Gospel. So you may harness your antagonist to your best interests and compel them to draw you on to better work and higher character. Suppose, interests and compel them to draw you on to better work and higher character. Suppose, in gard, or the moon in the first quarter, or with the sunrise, because you saw it just as you were arriving at harbor after a tempesture outs voyage. Forever and forever, O hearer, at the start you may make a complete failure one feel splendidly to be able by God's help to practice unlimited forgiveness. It improves one's body and soul. It will make you measure three or four more inches around the chest and improve your respiration so that you can take a deeper and longer breath. It you can take a deeper and longer breath. I improves the countenance by scattering the gloom, and brightening the forehead, and loosening the pinched look about the nostri and lip, and makes you somewhat like Goo himself. He is omnipotence, and we cannot copy that. He is omnipotence, and we cannot copy that. But he forgives with a broad sweep, all faults and all insults, and that. But he forgives with a broad sweet, an faults and all neglects, and all insults, an all wrong-doing, and in that we may cop him with mighty success. Go harness tha sublime action of your soul to an autumn sunset, the hour when the gate of heave opens to let the day pass into the eternitic and some of the glories escape this wa through the brief openings. We talk about the Italian sunsets and sunset amid the Ar through the brief openings. We talk about the Italian sunsets, and sunset amid the Appenines, and sunset amid the Corderillas. Bu I will tell you how you may see a grander sunset than any mere lover of nature ever beheld that is by flinging into it all your hatreds, and animosities, and let the horses of fire tramplethem, and the chariots of fire roll over them, and the spearmen of fire statem, and the beach of fire consume them and the billows of fire overwhelm them. The and the billows of fire overwhelm them. The sublimest thing God does is the sunset. The sublimest thing you can do is forgivenes. Along the glowing banks of this coming eventide let the divine and the human be concurrent-Again: We should not let the sun go down Again: We should not let the sun go down on our wrath because it is of little importance what the world says of you or does to you when you have the affluent God of the sunset as your provider and defender. People talk as though it were a fixed spectacle of nature and always the same. But no one ever saw two sunsets alike, and if the world has existed six thousand years there have been about two mil-lion one hundred and ninety thousand sunsets, each of them as distinct from all the other olctures in the gallery of the sky as Titian's 'Last Supper,' Rubens's "Descent from the Cross,' Raphael's Transfiguration," and Michael Angelo's 'Last Judgment,' are distinct Cross," Raphael's Transfiguration," and Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment," are distinct from each other. If that God of such infinite resources that he can put on the wall of the sky each night more than the Louver, and the Luxembourg, and the Vatican, and the Dresden, and Venetian galleries all in one, is my God and your God, our provider and protector, what is the use of our worrying about any human antagonism? If we are misinterpreted, the god of the many-colored sunset can put human antagonism? If we are misinterpreted, the god of the many-colored sunset can put the right color on our action. If He can afford to hang such masterpieces over the outside walls of heaven and have them obliterated in an hour, He must be very rich in resources and can put us through in safety. If all the garniture of the western heavens at eventide is but the upholstery of one of the windows of our future home, what small business for us to be chasing enemies! Let not this Sabbath sun go down upon your wrath.

Mahomet said: "The sword is the key of heaven and hell, a drop of blood shed is better than fasting, and wounds in the Day of Judgment resplendent asvermillion, and odoriferous as musk." But, my hearers, in the Last Day we will find just the opposite of that to be true, and that the sword never under the sails with the sails wounds.

odorferous as musk." But, my hearers, in the Last Day we will find just the opposite of that to be true, and that the sword never unlocks heaven, and that he who heals wounds is greater than He who makes them, and that on the same ring are two keys: God's forgiveness of us and our forgiveness of enemies, and these two keys unlock Paradise.

And now I wish for all of you a beautiful sunset in your earthly existence. With some of you it has been a long day of trouble, and with others of you it will be far from calm. When the sun rose at six o'clock it was the morning of youth, and a fair day was prophesied, but by the time the noon-day of mid-life had come and the clock of your earthly existence had struck twelve, cloud racks gathered and tempest bellowed in the track of tempest. But as the evening of old age approaches I pray God the skies may brighten and the clouds be piled up into pillars as of celestial temples to which you go, or move as with mounted cohorts come to take your home. And as you sink out of sight below the horizon may there be a radiance of Christian expense. and as you sink out of sight below the horzon may there be a radiance of Christian example lingering long after you are gone, and on the heavens be written in letters of sapphire and on the waters in letters of opal, and on the hills in letters of emerald: "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." So shall the sunset of earth become the suurise of heaven.

RATTLESNAKE POISON.

Its Annual Effects On a Boy WhoWas Bitten Four Years Ago.

On August 29, 1883, a five-year-old son of George Putnam, who lives at Stony Ford, Penn., was returning had began to swell, and his mother picked from the flesh what she at first supposed to be a brier, but, as the foot continued to swell and the boy's sufferings were intense, the alarming fact was made apparent that he had been bitten by some poisonous snake, and that the supposed brier was one of the fangs that had buried itself in the wound and been pulled from the snake's jaw. Mrs. Putnam called her husband who was at work near the house and alarmed other members of the family. A live chicken was cut in two and the warm flesh applied to the wound. Whisky was given the boy in large quantities, and a messenger was dispatched for a doctor. A member of the family went to the spot where the said he had felt the sharp sting and found a rattlesnake coiled near the roadside. The snake was killed and one of its fangs was found to be missing, which left no doubt of the nature of the boy's injury. The snake was cut open and laid on the wound in the boys foot which had swolen to more than double its natural size. The sufferings of the boy were so great that he could scarcely be held down in the bed by two men. The doctor arrived and cauterized the wound, but said it was too late and the boy would die. The swelling had extended up the leg to his waist, and the leg became spotted. Antidotes prescribed by the doctor were administered, but the whisky treatment was also adhered to. The boys' body turned black, but after | trouble." three days of the most terrible agony the swelling began to go down, and in a week the victim was able to get In a month's time all the

On the 26th of August, 1884, he was se zed with a sharp pain in his foot, which began to swell, and in a short time his leg and foot were swollen to double their size, and became spotted, as they had on the day the boy was bitten by the snake. He experienced the same symptoms, and suffered for three days almost as much agony as he had the year before. When the swelling again went down the pain subsided and patent." the symptoms disappeared. Regulary on the 29th of August ever vear since the same symptoms have appeared, on the authority of a well-known citizen of Tioga county, and their recurrence this year was marked by more than usual pain and swelling, the spots on the leg and body strikingly resembling that of a rattlesnake. The sufferings of the boy were so intense that he was not expected to pass through them with his life, but at last accounts he was slowly recovering. It is said that there are three similar cases on record—one of a girl who was bitten by a rattlesnake in Livingston county, New York, thirty years ago, and who for twenty-five years, on the anniversary of the day on which she was bitten, was a subject to the same symptoms as attended the original poisoning. She died in great agony on the twenty-fifth recurrence of the terriHARD LINES.

chocking Life Led by Laborers on the Panama Canal. Robert L. Knox, who has been connected with the Panama railway for the past six months, was a passenger on the steamer Acapulco, which arrived here Sept. 19. says The San Francisco Examiner. He was braking on the railway, and resigned his position several weeks before sailing. "I left Baltimore last winter," said "to look after work. I had been idle for some time and didn't care much what I took hold of. I got an offer to go to Panama and brake on the railway, and thinking of what I had been told of the climate, and being glad enough to get an opportunity to go to work, I accepted the offer.

"I arrived at Panama in due season, and was about to begin work two days after leaving the steamer when I was seized with a terrible fever. The air is thick and unhealthy, and I could scarcely breathe. I was convalescent at the end of a week, but I had something of the appearance of a skeleton, being only a ghost of my former self. "It's not necessary to relate my own experience; what was mine was that of everyone who goes there to stay. "Panama comes nearer being Hades than any place I was ever in. In the rainy season the colored people die off like a herd of cattle when disease spreads among them. On one place on the line daily funeral trains are run. The cemetery is fourteen miles from Aspinwall, and in the rainy season I have seen five trains drive down there.

"They have a curious way of burying people there. When the train reaches the graveyard the corpse is thrown into a hole two or three feet deep, and the coffin is taken back to carry some other poor unfortunate to his last resting place. "I went down one day to see the canal laborers at work, and I never will forget what I saw there. About four hundred men were at work in this one place. Every nationality was represented. There was the Scandinavian toiling in his mechanical way, the Hibernian was joking while he shoveled, the African negro, the Jamaica negro, Mexicans, English, French, Russians, Turks, all were there, and the John Chinaman, with his natty cue, worked in a broken hearted manner, sighing for the Flowery Kingdom which he left, hoping to better his fortunes in a foreign country. "Where the men were at work the ground was soft, muddy you would call it here. When it is muddy there the ground is like mush two feet deep. It was soft that day and fifty or more fresh colored fellows had been brought in. In the afternoon the heat and the air had their effects upon them and one by one they fell. I saw one man hit on the head by the excavating machine. He was killed. The body was immediately hoisted into the dumping tube, sent through the machine, and that was the last seen of him. You can see some shocking sights down there.

"At nightfall when the men are through work for the day they begin a home from driving the cows to pasture, | night's debauch on whisky smuggled step of his left foot. He ran crying | The men will drink. If they did not 1 | scratched his foot on a brier. The foot | they become intoxicated nothing will | satisfy them but a fight.

"If they would fight with their fists it would not be so bad, but long sharp knives are drawn and are red with blood before sheathed again. Sometimes the most horrible butcheries are committed, and while one man is being stabbed and hacked to pieces, the others stand off and jeer, and comment on the beauty of the contest.

"In a big city you can see human forms of vice practiced in New York and London and Paris are nowhere it is a convulsive catch." when compared with what can be seen every day on the isthmus.

"After one of the contractors on the who attempted his life, they are very careful how they treat the railway hands. The latter go well armed, and on the first motion made by any of the

Where stacking hay on the farm is a permanent business, to be continued from year to year, it is doubtless economy to build roofed hay sheds, using telegraph poles set in the ground for posts and a board roof, boarding the gables and sides down four to six feet below the eaves, and leaving the rest open. Canvas covers, though valuable to protect stacks of hay or grain while building, and for use in threshing, and for many other purposes on the farm are too expensive to be used permanently as stack covers and exposed to the effects of the weather. They are valuable, and every farm should have a reasonable supply of them.

The value of hay for feeding purposes depends upon the digestible nutritive properties it contains. And these depend upon its kind, its time of cutting, manner of curing and the way it is kept after being cured. All the first-named conditions may be complied with, and the hay go into the stock in fine condition, only to there lose a large percentage of its value because the stack is improperly built, and has no extra protection from the effects of the beating rain storms. - Practical Farmer.

The Queer Things We Eat.

The French are notoriously addicted to frogs, which command a high price in new York, also, where they sell the large bullfrogs, sometimes weighing half a pound, as well as the tender little green animal (rana esculenta), whose hind legs taste so like delicate chicken when served with white sauce in restaurants and hotels of Paris or Vienna. Of course frogs do not escape the Chinese, who devour everything with blood and fibre; and the negroes of Surinam eat the loathsome Surinam toad. Monkeys are also considered good eating in some countries. African epicures are never more charmed than when they can dine off a highlyseasoned tender, voung monkey bake gipsy fashion in the earth. The great red monkey, the spider monkey, and the howling monkey are all eaten by the various peoples among whom they are found. The flesh of the monkey is said to be both nutritious and pleasant.

The American panther and the wild cat of Louisiana are said to be excellent eating, so is the puma, which is so like veal in flavor that one hardly knows the difference. Lion's flesh, too, is almost identical with veal in color, taste and texture. Bears' paws were long a Germany delicacy, and the flesh is held equal or superior to pork, the fat being as white as snow. The tongue and hams are cured, but the head is accounted worthless and thrown away. The badger tastes like wild boar. The Australian kangaroo is not much inferior to venison, and kangaroo tail soup is better than half the the name of ox-tail soup. Hashed

The Great Irish Editor.

"And how do you find things in Canada this spring?" I asked Mr. O'Brien, the great Irish agitator, when he was visiting this country, says Bill Nye, in The New York World, as he sat in an upholstered chair that must have cost $13.

"And what things do you refer to?" asked Mr. O'Brien, with great inge-

"Why, most anything," I said, playfully. "How's things? How do you find things? Or did people bring them to you?" I added, with a certain kind of grim humor, as I nibbled thoughtfully at a cold foul which the hotel way in which the people have turned out en masse and walked on you?"

"O. I dislike it, of course," said Mr. O'Brien, as he watched me toughtfully while I hung the wishbone on the gas-fixture and daintly wiped my fingers on my late hair, in order to show him that we are just as neat and carefnl in our personal habits here as we would be if we lived under an effete monarchy with proud flesh in it. "Had I thought that Canada would greet me in the way she did, caving in my thorax with paving-stones and planting large new lumps all over my person, I do not know that I would have visited the Dominion at all, but I got a good many subscribers and several orders for job work, which I will take home with me to-morrow."

"I suppose your paper has a policy. Mr. O'Brien," said I, languidly reading a letter which lay on the table. "Do you have a policy for your paper or do you print it by hand?"

"O, but you know there is no similarity in the two propositions. The policy of a paper and the mechanical part of it in Ireland is two separate and distinct details involving-the one, of course, the sentiments, the other, the mere details of the work."

"Well, letting that pass, do you have to contend against the interstate commerce law where you are, O'Brien, or do you, when you start out after a landlord, take your shotgun and ride perfectly free and untrammeled."

"We have no interstate commerce law over there, over there," said Mr. O'Brien, dropping into the words of an old hymn very naturally. "But we do not have the time that I would like in which to write editorials. We do not rely so much on our circulation, though, as you do. We run a paper more for the excitement, perhaps, and the job work than anything else. We print anything in our office from a milk ticket up to a three-sheet poster, and that with our agitation keeps us quite busy. We are passionately fond of agitation in Ireland, and so really I have enjoyed my trip through Canada very much. I wanted to get out and see more of the world, and also to observe carefully the recent style of curve-egg tossing and dead-cat fielding in America, and I have got many good points."

"Do you propose going right through from here to Liverpool, or will you lay over on your way and make observations?" I asked, with a weak attempt to be grammatical.

"Oh, I shall not make any stops, but will pull right along. Should I lie over at all it will only be to lie over the taffrail and try to ascertain what the wild waves are saying. But I long to be back attending to my agitating business and treading the 'jobber.' I am now packing my trunk in order to get ready for my journey to-morrow. So, if you will excuse me, I guess I will have to ask you to go."

It was more than half an hour after this that I suddenly decided that I would remain no longer, for Mr. O Brien's cordiality by that time had an air of insincerity that I hate to see.

Wringing his hands, however, as though 1 did not observe his coldness. I took a fresh eigar from the center table, and, calling a cab, walked, leisurely down the street, and was soon engaged in earnest conversation with a confidence man on Broadway.

P. S.-Mr. O Brien opened the window in order to say to me that if I wished to I might add that he was not a candidate for any office in this country, and therefore he had felt more like doing as he had a mind to than he otherwise might have felt. As I looked back I saw Mr. O Brien trying to remove from the back of his coat a design in spatter work, done in oil, by means of a tooth-brush and a small bottle of ammonia. People who desire their agitating done cheaply and promptly will do well to figure with Mr. O Brien.

"Yes," said the editor, as he put his mucilage brush in the ink bottle and tried to paste on a clipping with his stub pen, "yes, the great fault of newspaper contributors is carlessness. Indeed," he continued, as he dropped the copy he had been writing, into the waste basket, and marked "Editorial" across the corner of a poem entitled an "Ode to Death," "contributors are terribly careless. You would be surprised," said he, as he clipped a column of fashion items and labelled them "Farm Notes," to see the slipshod writing that comes into the editorial sanctum. Misspelled, unpunctuated, written on both sides of the sheet, illegible, ungramatical stuff. Contributors are terribly careless. At Ypsilanti we saw upon the streets Mr. P. D. Rogers and wife attended proof positive that some cancers can be cured. A woman upon whose chin was formerly a spider cancer, very malignant and rapidly spreading, and when we left the place already encompassing the entire jaw, had the dread disease entirely eradicated by the use of the mineral water found there. The woman's face to-day shows no evidence of the former trouble save seam-like scars, which are as free from discoloration as any of her face.

"Hello, Dick, old boy; give us a light. Thanks. By the way, Dick, where is it you get your Clothing? Now my clothes, which I got same time or thereabout, look rumpled up, out of shape, and no style; while yours look as well as if the best tailor in the state made 'em."

"Why, Jo, my dear fellow, you must go to JOE SANDERS' if you want good clothes and a fit. You see it don't cost any more to get the style and that, if you go to Sanders', than it costs to dress like you. Ta-ta, old fellow. Try Sanders next time, and you'll be suited, and you wont be paralized by your suspender button flying off when you make a bow to a lady acquaintance on the street, either."
